Pix Me Up

Pix Me Up is our latest game released early November on Android phones and tablets. It's a game combining strategic thinking with memory skills. For children and parents, the principle is simple: you have PIXs, small squares of color, that you need to assemble to make the requested pattern.

Check your progress on a map, share your scores online, on social networks ... All this is possible!

Pix Me Up is free and includes InApp purchases. Please download it here.

Bip, bip, bip ...

When using one of our applications on Android phones or tablets, we recommend you do not press the "Power" button (on/off). The application is quitted without saving the current game on a few phones.

If you need to get out quickly, use the "Home" button, which takes you back to the Home screen of your phone or tablet while preserving the progress of your games.

High scores sharing

Do you know that most Boing Attitude games allow you to share scores?

Ask Me Up XXL, Ask Me Up, Ask Me Up Nantes and Pix Me Up allow to share your scores and to compare yourself to other players from around the world... So do not hesitate!

The sharing is done very simply by clicking on the sharing button, located on the map or in the scores screen. Your e-mail client opens automatically. If you use Android, please select Gmail only.

You then receive an e-mail when your scores have been integrated (it usually takes a few minutes or a few hours at worst).

2017 roadmap

On Android devices, Ask Me Up and its declination on the city of Nantes will also include two new game modes but also new questions, features, ..

New levels will also be designed for Pix Me Up, new games, like the Gang of Four, will be managed by Scores Me Up. The AmigaOS Dir Me Up explorer will also be improved.
